

THE ACT and UTO are currently implementing “Maji Kwa Amani” water for peace project.

The Anglican Church of Tanzania (ACT) announces that it has been able to enter partnership agreement with the United Thank Offering (UTO) to implement the “MAJI KWA AMANI (Water for Peace)” project, in initiative designed to promote peace, sustainable water access, and community resilience in Dodoma, Morogoro, and Manyara regions of Tanzania

The project is aimed to specifically reduce Farmer–Pastoralist Conflict in Kiteto, Mvomero, and Kongwa Districts. Through this initiative the ACT will work with communities to strengthen shared water infrastructure, promote inclusive participation in water governance, engage youth as peacebuilders, and support women-led mixed agriculture initiatives that contribute to improved livelihoods and peaceful coexistence.

The project reflects ACT’s commitment to serving communities through holistic ministry that addresses spiritual, social, environmental, and economic needs while promoting reconciliation and the well-being of all people. The project is made possible through the generous support of the United Thank Offering (UTO).
